

Mitchell Taylor sets out to build viable alternative to Noddy houses

16 May 2011 | By Elizabeth Hopkirk

PRINT | @ EMAIL | + SHARE |    |  COMMENT

 SAVE

Three houses built for £200,000

Mitchell Taylor Workshop has completed a residential project in a Devon village for less than £70,000 per house and using only materials available in the local builder's merchant.

The three town houses on a suburban estate in Tiverton - two black and one red - were built for a combined contract sum of around £200,000.

Piers Taylor of Mitchell Taylor Workshop said: "The point of the project was to demonstrate that for less than £900 per sq m there is an alternative to the ubiquitous developer fodder which surrounds it."

They were built using just material that could be sourced in the local Jewson's.

The Bath-based practice has also just started on site with a music school for a college in Berkshire.

RELATED ARTICLES

Mitchell Taylor wins planning to transform hangar into homes

18 November 2010

Mitchell Taylor Workshop's library for King's College, Taunton

02 July 2010